Janette K. Conger, Crow Creek Sioux, Cherokee
Native American Poet

BIOGRAPHY

Janette K. Conger was born and raised in Seattle, Washington, as an enrolled member of the Crow Creek Sioux Tribe in South Dakota. She began writing poetry at the age of 14. Currently she lives in Shoreline, Washington. Throughout Janette’s writing career she has won two awards: 1989 Golden Poet Award by the World of Poetry (travelled to Washington D.C. to receive it), and 1st Place in Prose/Poetry by United Indians of All Tribes Foundation in 1978. Janette has published three books of poetry and is working on her fourth. Janette walks as a caretaker and steward for our trees, waters, animals and all of Life on Mother Earth. These are her creative focus throughout her poetic word. Janette continues to make her voice heard wherever called through her poetic expressions.
